

RS Academics and The Wellbeing Hub: Innovative new partnership

RS Academics and The Wellbeing Hub, from Teen Tips, are delighted to announce a partnership, which means UK and International schools can access a unique combination of knowledge, support and guidance on wellbeing.

Heather Styche-Patel, CEO of RS Academics, said:

“We are excited about this innovative partnership. The Wellbeing Hub and RS Academics have a strong shared ethos and an overarching mission to help schools thrive. Our consultancy work highlights the increasing importance of supporting student wellbeing and our latest research report¹ found that supporting student mental health is the area where Heads had seen the most change over the last 10 years.”

The Wellbeing Hub offers a proactive approach to young people’s mental health and wellbeing by providing evidenced-based support for the whole school community. It is a live and interactive web app delivering support and advice through podcasts, online courses for parents and staff, webinars, live Q&As, Q&A libraries, careers advice, PSHE resources, access to specialists, and much more. The Wellbeing Hub is currently impacting more than 150,000 pupils in over 230 schools.

RS Academics is a trusted consulting partner for schools worldwide. More than 700 schools have benefited from strategy, marketing and research services provided by RS Academics. The new partnership means that alongside their wellbeing research services, RS Academics can offer their client schools access to the best wellbeing advice and resources.

The Wellbeing Hub, in turn, will benefit from RS Academics research expertise and insight generated through thought leadership and survey services, including their new Pupil Voice survey service. Through this shared knowledge and expertise, the partnership will ensure The Wellbeing Hub remains at the forefront of wellbeing support and advice.

Alicia Drummond, founder of Teen Tips and The Wellbeing Hub, said:

“We’re absolutely delighted to be working with RS Academics. We believe in early intervention when it comes to mental health and the more informed we are about current trends, the better able The Wellbeing Hub will be to support whole school communities.”

About RS Academics

Founded in 2002, RS Academics help schools to thrive by finding and developing leaders, guiding decision makers, making connections, and shaping debate. The company works with around 300 schools and school groups every year as a research and strategic consultancy partner. Since 2009, RS Academics has worked with more than 600 governing bodies, CEOs and Boards of Directors, to place the most outstanding people at the helm of their educational communities and enterprises. As a leading provider of services to schools worldwide, RS Academics benefits from a team of almost 100 experienced consultants who are passionate about education and committed to helping schools succeed.

About The Wellbeing Hub

A trusted source of support for parents, pupils and staff, The Wellbeing Hub is designed by experts to meet the social, emotional and educational needs of young people. By providing those looking after children and young people with access to up-to-date professional advice and practical tools, they are more equipped to deal with the pressures of growing up. We draw on the latest research from psychotherapy, psychology and neuroscience, along with Founder, Alicia Drummond's experience of working as an adolescent therapist and being a mum.

Contacts:

Amy Costello, Marketing and Communications Manager, RSAcademics
amycostello@rsacademics.com

Katie Lawson, Head of Business Development, The Wellbeing Hub
katie@teentips.co.uk